*Ethanol, Bread
Dough, and Hops:*

TIMELY HOLIDAY WOES

Winter holidays present a unique trilogy of toxins--booze, bread dough, and brew kits. It's easy to understand how dogs and cats can be poisoned from booze (ethanol) in beverages or rum soaked desserts, but did you realize that bread dough, rotten apples, and fermented food are other sources of alcohol? But why are homebrew kits on this list? While beer starter kits don't contain any alcohol, these popular gifts often contain hops. Both hops pellets (unused) and spent (cooked) hops can result in life threatening hyperthermia if ingested. Think twice before leaving this beneath the tree!
